Information for Contributors

ASIAN PERSPECTIVES welcomes articles concerning archaeology and prehistory of Asia and the Pacific. Manuscripts must be typed, preferably in English, double-spaced, on eight and one-half by eleven inch bond, not onionskin. The author should refer to himself in the first person singular.

Documentation follows the style of the American Anthropologist. For each work cited or explicitly referred to, the writer should: give the author’s full name; date of publication; complete title of the work; journal name, if applicable, and volume and issue numbers as they appear, whether arabic or roman; specific page references; place of publication; and publisher. Material should be arranged under the order of headings used in ASIAN PERSPECTIVES, not in outline style.

For consistency, Asian names of persons should be written in text with family names last. In bibliographies, alphabetizing should be by family name followed by a comma before the given name or initial. In multiple-author listings, however, only the name mentioned first should be written in reverse order.
