

Contents

Foreword	iii
Marianne Mithun
Contributors	v
Acknowledgments	viii
1. Introduction: The Boasian tradition and contemporary practice in linguistic fieldwork in the Americas Daisy Rosenblum and Andrea L. Berez	1
2. Sociopragmatic influences on the development and use of the discourse marker vet in Ixil Maya Jule Gómez de García, Melissa Axelrod, and María Luz García	9
3. Classifying clitics in Sm'algyax: Approaching theory from the field Jean Mulder and Holly Sellers	33
4. Noun class and number in Kiowa-Tanoan: Comparative-historical research and respecting speakers' rights in fieldwork Logan Sutton	57
5. The story of *o in the Cariban family Spike Gildea, B.J. Hoff, and Sérgio Meira	91
6. Multiple functions, multiple techniques: The role of methodology in a study of Zapotec determiners Donna Fenton	125
7. Middles and reflexives in Yucatec Maya: Trusting speaker intuition Israel Martínez Corripio and Ricardo Maldonado	147
8. Studying Dena'ina discourse markers: Evidence from elicitation and narrative Olga Charlotte Lovick	173
9. Be careful what you throw out: Gemination and tonal feet in Weledeh Dogrib Alessandro Jaker	203
10. Revisiting the source: Non-finite verbs in Sierra Popoluca (Mixe-Zoque) Lynda Boudreault	223