ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Center for Philippine Studies acknowledges with thanks the grant given by the Center for Southeast Asian Studies, which funded the printing and publication of this informational material and the assistance provided by the Office of University Relations and the Hawaiian Collection, Hamilton Library, UHM.
The Center for Philippine Studies is one of the nine area studies centers at the University of Hawai'i, Asian and Pacific Studies (SHAPS) at the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa. It is the only academic institution in the United States offering Philippine studies degree programs complemented by research and outreach activities. It encourages undergraduate and graduate students to pursue Philippine studies as an area of concentration or a minor field while earning their degrees in the humanities, social sciences, or various professional schools.

Part of the mission of the Center is to promote research, especially among graduate students at UH, related to the Philippines, including Filipinos overseas. As an initial attempt to develop a catalogue of the masters theses and dissertations that has been done at the University of Hawai'i over the past 70 years, the staff of the Center has undertaken this current project. Most of the theses and dissertations are available in the Hawaiian section of the Hamilton Library at UHM. Microfiche copies are also available at the circulation section of Hamilton Library.

This initial catalogue contains 304 entries, consisting of 154 masters theses and 150 PhD dissertations. Approximately 38 percent of the studies (i.e., 115) were done by Filipino students. All in all, they can be categorized into 43 subject areas ranging from agricultural and resource economics to biomedical sciences, from communication to zoology. The UH departments that have produced the most theses and dissertations on topics related to the Philippines and overseas Filipinos include political science (31), anthropology (30), psychology (27) and sociology (25).

According to our catalogue, the earliest graduate study dealing with Filipinos in Hawai'i was done by Marjorie E. Babcock, a future UH professor. In 1927, her master's thesis in psychology was entitled "Some applications of clinical psychology in Hawai'i." The most recent graduate works as this catalogue goes to print were done in 1997 by six students: Marco A. Bautista's master's thesis in Agricultural and Resource Economics entitled "An economic analysis of rice production in the Philippines (1970–1994)"; Rod Labrador's "Constructing and deconstructing 'Kaigorotan': examining attempts to formulate, articulate, legitimate panethnicity in the Cordillera" for his master's thesis in Asian Studies; Enrique Francia's master's thesis in English entitled "Rizal as anting-anting: subversion and indigenization in Philippine folk religion narratives"; Macrina Abenjoa's PhD dissertation "Immigration patterns, locale orientation, and life satisfaction among elderly Filipinos on O'ahu"; Francisco A. Magno's PhD dissertation on "Crafting conservation: social capital, and tenurial security in northern Philippines"; and Marissa Garcia's PhD dissertation entitled "The development of social networks; subsistence production and exchange between the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries A.D. in the Tanjay region, Negros Oriental, the Philippines."

The scholars in this catalogue who would later join the academic, educational, governmental, and policy-making ranks is also quite impressive. More than a dozen of the theses and dissertations included in this collection have been published as books or as articles in academic journals.

As this is an initial attempt to provide a guide of the theses and dissertations produced at the University of Hawai'i, we have not had the opportunity to annotate the entries listed. It is our hope that this catalogue will encourage more students to undertake research on the Philippines and Filipinos overseas. At the very least, it should make students of the Philippines and Filipinos more aware of studies that have been done at the University of Hawai'i and, therefore, promote wider use of these research materials.

We are grateful to the staff of the Center for Philippine Studies, especially Marissa Garcia and Amelia Bello, both of whom are also writing their PhD dissertations on the Philippines, for doing the arduous task of locating and compiling this guide. We are indebted to Clemen Montero for providing staff support and Alice Mak, Philippine specialist, Asia Collection, Hamilton Library, for her suggestions.
INTRODUCTION

This is a compilation of doctoral dissertations and master's theses submitted to the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa in all fields of study that include the Philippines and Filipinos as a subject of inquiry. The compilers have attempted to make this an inclusive list, so studies that contain any mention of the Philippines or Filipinos have been included. Coverage begins with the first thesis on the Philippines submitted in 1927 and ends with December 1997.

This list cumulates entries from The Philippine and Filipinos in Hawai'i: A List of Dissertations and Master's Theses Completed at the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa, 1934–1982, compiled by Shiro Saito for the Philippine Studies Program in 1982; and selected citations from Asian Studies in Hawai'i, by Laurianne Chun, published by the UHM School of Hawaiian, Asian and Pacific Studies and Social Process in Hawai'i in 1997; and from the dissertation and thesis lists compiled by the Hawaiian Collection, Hamilton Library, University of Hawai'i at Mānoa.

The citations are arranged by the department to which the dissertation or thesis was submitted. For departments that have changed their names, both the original and the new names are included. An author index follows the listing.

Each entry includes the author's name, title, degree, year of completion, pagination, and UHM Library call number. Some departments state the specialty in which the degree was awarded; this information is also included. Citations for degrees awarded in December 1997 may contain the abbreviation NA (not available). These citations were not cataloged at the time of publication so information is incomplete. The UHM on-line catalog should be consulted for current information.

All dissertations and theses are in the Hawaiian Collection, Hamilton Library, UHM. They are all available in paper copy. Some are also available in microform copy.

Inquiries regarding borrowing dissertations and theses should be addressed to External Services Program, Hamilton Library, University of Hawai'i at Mānoa, 2550 The Mall, Honolulu, HI 96822 or directed by telephone to (808) 956-5956. Microfilmed dissertations listed in Dissertations Abstracts International can be purchased directly from University Microfilms, 300 North Zeeb Road, Ann Arbor, MI 48106-1346.

The UHM Library's home page located at www2.hawaii.edu/uhlib/ should be consulted for current information on library services and hours and to access the on-line catalog.
