Students find focus in UH’s RIOs

By Robbie Shikina

Just as twilight was passing into night, 18 University of Hawai‘i students stood inside Studio 3 of the university athletic complex and bowed in unison to begin their weekday cere– mony.

Clothed in durable white uniforms called Gi, these students are part of the Pacific Shotokan Karate-Do, a martial arts organization listed as a UH Registered Independent Organization.

There wasn’t much joking around during practice as students listened closely to the instruction of their sensei. In a reverent atmosphere, the students progressed through stretching, technical drills, paired exercises, and finally covered the memorized, formal routines called Kata.

But at least one of the students says she isn’t in the club for the social aspect of it. She likes the club because it’s part of who she is.

UH student organizations are not only club activities. For some of the students they are a part of their lifestyle.

“(It’s) like a lifestyle rather than a sport,” she said. “It becomes you rather than (you) it.”

That’s exactly what Jan Javinar, director of Co-curricular Activities, Programs and Services at UH, likes to hear.

Caps, the division at UH that oversees the 100 plus Registered Independent Organizations (RIOs) on campus, includes such categories as academic, cultural, fraternity, sorority and religious.

Javinar said she hopes students gain awareness and understanding from their experience in a student organization.

She said one goal for the RIOs “is to enhance the life on campus, whether it’s in promoting cultural understanding, religious understanding, service, whatever they may contribute to the campus.”

For many RIO club members, their goal in college is to enrich their college experience and express who they are.

Shotokan Karate-Do’s appeal is its social dimension.

“In class you don’t chat. In that way, it’s harder to get to know people,” Wendy said.

Instead, she said it “focuses a lot on discipline on the mind and body, controlling thoughts and the center of concentration.”

Following the ceremonious atmosphere of Shotokan Karate-Do, was the Rainbow Jugglers Juggling Club. The jugglers started in Studio 3 immediately after Shotokan Karate-Do, complete with flying bowling pin-shaped objects, multi-colored balls and zooming unicyles.

The Rainbow Jugglers, an RIO at UH since 1989, meet every Monday. The meeting was found in moments of silence when members practiced a new technique.

Karen Lostititto, a math major from Brown University who spent a semester abroad at UH last fall, found out about the RJJC online. She’s been juggling for about two and a half years now and has joined Brown University’s juggling club.

Lostititto said she likes being in the juggling club because “you get to meet others who...”

A University of Hawai‘i student finds a moment to rest in the shade during the busy pace of the new spring semester on Tuesday.

Sunnis switch plans for election

By Nancy A. Yousuff and Warren P. Strobel

Knight Ridder Newspapers

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq’s principal Sunni Muslim political party conceded yesterday that its effort to delay Iraq’s parliamentary election had failed and that it was preparing a strategy to influence the elected government following the vote on March 27.

The Iraqi Islamic Party’s willingness to accept and engage a new government indicated a possible avenue for Sunni participation well short of the civil war feared by many analysts, even though the party said it wouldn’t reverse its decision to boycott the election. Majority Shiite Muslims are expected to dominate the new government.

The party’s stance gave substance to Bush administration hopes that a widespread boycott of the vote wouldn’t preclude Sunni participation in the new government. Broad Sunni participation could be key to lending legitimacy to a new constitution and eventually undermining popular support for the Iraqi insurgency.

“The Americans are insisting these elections go on time,” said Ayad al Samarre, deputy chairman of the Iraqi Islamic Party. “Most probably, there will be no delay.

Instead of trying to halt the elections, al Samarre said the party would focus on giving Sunnis a voice in the government and was now reaching out to other parties and encouraging them to work together.

“We are going to have to try to influence through talking with other groups,” al Samarre said. The victory in these talks “is not about looking at it as a personal victory. It will be a responsi–
The disciplined structure and respectful atmosphere of a karate class helps students refocus after a long day at school. One student said, “It’s like a lifestyle rather than a sport. It becomes you rather than (you) it.”

Senzara comes from the Brazilian word for “slave quarters.”

“It’s art, dance, non-verbal communication. It’s a dialogue.” said Kakwira Cook, a UH student also in the Capoeira group.

Javinair said he’s happy with the diverse student organizations on campus.

“Life is organized around groups whether it’s family, work, religion, clubs,” Javinair said. “So clubs to me represent that opportunity for people to learn how to work better with others.”

Javinair added there are additional challenges with clubs at UH today compared with previous generations.

“You guys are a lot less focused on campus than we were,” Javinair said. “That creates a whole bunch of additional challenges for clubs in nominating officers and to get others involved.”

“CAPS is trying to make it easier for students to start new organizations and join others. All the RIOs at UH are listed on UH’s Web site. CAPS also provides the paperwork for registering new organizations online.”

Javinair said a minimum of six people can form a new RIO. CAPS helps organizations with funding, workshops, advice and leadership training.

Zenas Kwak, an accounting major who is a member of the Accounting club, said, “We have lots of cool socials, we go to play pool, we also have professional tours. It’s a good way to get into the field because you get to see the work environment … All my friends are into clubs.”

The disciplined structure and respectful atmosphere of a karate class helps students refocus after a long day at school. One student said, “It’s like a lifestyle rather than a sport. It becomes you rather than (you) it.”

Javinair said he’s happy with the diverse student organizations on campus.

“Life is organized around groups whether it’s family, work, religion, clubs,” Javinair said. “So clubs to me represent that opportunity for people to learn how to work better with others.”

Javinair added there are additional challenges with clubs at UH today compared with previous generations.

“You guys are a lot less focused on campus than we were,” Javinair said. “That creates a whole bunch of additional challenges for clubs in nominating officers and to get others involved.”

“CAPS is trying to make it easier for students to start new organizations and join others. All the RIOs at UH are listed on UH’s Web site. CAPS also provides the paperwork for registering new organizations online.”

Javinair said a minimum of six people can form a new RIO. CAPS helps organizations with funding, workshops, advice and leadership training.

Zenas Kwak, an accounting major who is a member of the Accounting club, said, “We have lots of cool socials, we go to play pool, we also have professional tours. It’s a good way to get into the field because you get to see the work environment … All my friends are into clubs.”

Senzara comes from the Brazilian word for “slave quarters.”

“It’s art, dance, non-verbal communication. It’s a dialogue.” said Kakwira Cook, a UH student also in the Capoeira group.

Javinair said he’s happy with the diverse student organizations on campus.

“Life is organized around groups whether it’s family, work, religion, clubs,” Javinair said. “So clubs to me represent that opportunity for people to learn how to work better with others.”

Javinair added there are additional challenges with clubs at UH today compared with previous generations.

“You guys are a lot less focused on campus than we were,” Javinair said. “That creates a whole bunch of additional challenges for clubs in nominating officers and to get others involved.”

“CAPS is trying to make it easier for students to start new organizations and join others. All the RIOs at UH are listed on UH’s Web site. CAPS also provides the paperwork for registering new organizations online.”

Javinair said a minimum of six people can form a new RIO. CAPS helps organizations with funding, workshops, advice and leadership training.

Zenas Kwak, an accounting major who is a member of the Accounting club, said, “We have lots of cool socials, we go to play pool, we also have professional tours. It’s a good way to get into the field because you get to see the work environment … All my friends are into clubs.”

Senzara comes from the Brazilian word for “slave quarters.”

“It’s art, dance, non-verbal communication. It’s a dialogue.” said Kakwira Cook, a UH student also in the Capoeira group.

Javinair said he’s happy with the diverse student organizations on campus.

“Life is organized around groups whether it’s family, work, religion, clubs,” Javinair said. “So clubs to me represent that opportunity for people to learn how to work better with others.”

Javinair added there are additional challenges with clubs at UH today compared with previous generations.

“You guys are a lot less focused on campus than we were,” Javinair said. “That creates a whole bunch of additional challenges for clubs in nominating officers and to get others involved.”

“CAPS is trying to make it easier for students to start new organizations and join others. All the RIOs at UH are listed on UH’s Web site. CAPS also provides the paperwork for registering new organizations online.”

Javinair said a minimum of six people can form a new RIO. CAPS helps organizations with funding, workshops, advice and leadership training.

Zenas Kwak, an accounting major who is a member of the Accounting club, said, “We have lots of cool socials, we go to play pool, we also have professional tours. It’s a good way to get into the field because you get to see the work environment … All my friends are into clubs.”
Education, not indoctrination for students

By Kevin Collins
Daily Pennsylvanian (U. Pennsylvania)

(U-WIRE) PHILADELPHIA — This past December, as we were finishing up our final papers and exams, the staff of Democratic Congressman Henry Waxman (D-CA) was putting the final touches on a report of its own. The Waxman report describes how scientifically invalid the information included in sex-education programs funded by the federal government is. These are among the statements highlighted by the Waxman report: Various abstinence-only curricula taught students that mutual masturbation can cause pregnancy, have AIDS, that HIV can be transmitted by tears and sweat, and that condoms fail to prevent the transmission of HIV 31 percent of the time.

Others claim that “a pregnancy occurs one out of every seven times that couples use condoms.” While this isn’t true, the research from which it is derived does show higher levels of condom failures when condoms are not used properly. Since abstinence-only education programs don’t teach proper condom use, they are only increasing unexpected pregnancies. And those are just a few examples of false and misleading statements subsidized by your federal government.

The goal of these programs is clearly to scare teens into abstinence, a goal that some justify distorted teaching and outright lies. Why do people think fear is a particularly effective tool with high school students, too often deluded with a sense of invulnerability, is beyond me. In fact, abstinence-only education does not work better than other programs in accomplishing its stated goals. According to the Waxman report, Columbia University researchers found that virgins pledge programs did help delay teen sex, but when participants became sexually active they were less likely to use contraception or be tested for sexually transmitted diseases. These problems arise when moral beliefs to stay safe? However, abstinence-only education disregards the well-being of individuals who stray from the moral course. Inherent in these policies is the belief that sinners deserve the consequences of their sins, even if they could have been protected with education.

The most troubling aspect of this policy is not that it teaches falsehoods, but that it seeks to deny basic realities. In this, the Waxman report fits into a larger critique of the conservative movement outlined by writer David Sisc Kirst in a pre-election Newsweek feature. He distinguished the “reality-based” community of rational thinkers from the “faith-based” world of the Bush Administration that does not rely upon facts but upon instinct to make decisions. To call this faith-based is inaccurate and unfair. Faith is a powerful belief in something bigger than oneself and fundamentally is both humble and humbling.

By contrast, these policies show the height of human hubris. Supremely self-confident, proponents of abstinence-only education believe they remake the world — not in their own image, but in the way they imagine others to be. Simply by ignoring the fact that many teens have sex despite abstinence-only education.

The Voice of Hawai'i

Ka Leo O Hawai'i

The Ka Leo building

University of Hawai'i at Mānoa

1755 Pope Road 31-D

Honolulu, HI 96822

Newsroom: (808) 956-7043
Advertising: (808) 956-7043
Facsimile: (808) 956-9962
E-mail: kaLeo@kaleo.org

Web-site: www.kaleo.org

© 2004 Ka Leo O Hawai'i

Editor-in-Chief............................................... Travis Ozazon
Managing Editor.............................................. Stephanie Kong
Assistant Editor............................................... Alex Kim
Campus News Editor........................................ Carol Pereira
Features Editor............................................... Marla Ting
Associate Feature Editor................................. Kimberly Shigewa
Copy Editor..................................................... J. R. Echevarria
Opinions Editor............................................. Christopher Mikael
Associate Opinions Editor................................. Jilana Tsin
Sports Editor.................................................... Leilani M. Cola
Associate Sports Editor................................. Michelle Enomoto
Visual Editor.................................................. Tanya Vanon
Photo Editor.................................................. Addy Mattas
Associate Photo Editor.................................. D.2.2.2.
Comics Editor.................................................. Coleen Qui
Online Editor.................................................. Ashley Kana

ADVERTISING

Editorial

Travis Ozazon
Alexandria Do Silva
Stephanie Kong
Jilana Tsin
Carol Pereira
Christopher Mikael
Michelle Enomoto
D.2.2.2.
J. R. Echevarria
Ashley Kana
Korean Kana
Tanya Vanon
Addy Mattas

Advertising Manager

Associate Features Editor

Kit Yang
Shayla Thong
Andrew Higa
Roxanne Lee

Assistant Features Editor

Addy Mattas

Opinions Editor

Alexander Do Silva
Cristina Kana

Sports Editor

Korean Kana
Addy Mattas

Visual Editor

Jilana Tsin
Addy Mattas

Photo Editor

Michelle Enomoto
Addy Mattas

Associate Photo Editor

D.2.2.2.
Addy Mattas

Comics Editor

Addy Mattas

Online Editor

Addy Mattas

Advice to the Reader

There are no comments to this story.

The final word is your word.

If you have a comment on this story, please send it to the editor.

By Kevin Collins

Daily Pennsylvanian (U. Pennsylvania)

(U-WIRE) PHILADELPHIA — This past December, as we were finishing up our final papers and exams, the staff of Democratic Congressman Henry Waxman (D-CA) was putting the final touches on a report of its own. The Waxman report describes how scientifically invalid the information included in sex-education programs funded by the federal government is. These are among the statements highlighted by the Waxman report: Various abstinence-only curricula taught students that mutual masturbation can cause pregnancy, have AIDS, that HIV can be transmitted by tears and sweat, and that condoms fail to prevent the transmission of HIV 31 percent of the time.

Others claim that “a pregnancy occurs one out of every seven times that couples use condoms.” While this isn’t true, the research from which it is derived does show higher levels of condom failures when condoms are not used properly. Since abstinence-only education programs don’t teach proper condom use, they are only increasing unexpected pregnancies. And those are just a few examples of false and misleading statements subsidized by your federal government.

The goal of these programs is clearly to scare teens into abstinence, a goal that some justify distorted teaching and outright lies. Why do people think fear is a particularly effective tool with high school students, too often deluded with a sense of invulnerability, is beyond me. In fact, abstinence-only education does not work better than other programs in accomplishing its stated goals. According to the Waxman report, Columbia University researchers found that virgins pledge programs did help delay teen sex, but when participants became sexually active they were less likely to use contraception or be tested for sexually transmitted diseases. These problems arise when moral beliefs to stay safe? However, abstinence-only education disregards the well-being of individuals who stray from the moral course. Inherent in these policies is the belief that sinners deserve the consequences of their sins, even if they could have been protected with education.

The most troubling aspect of this policy is not that it teaches falsehoods, but that it seeks to deny basic realities. In this, the Waxman report fits into a larger critique of the conservative movement outlined by writer David Sisc Kirst in a pre-election Newsweek feature. He distinguished the “reality-based” community of rational thinkers from the “faith-based” world of the Bush Administration that does not rely upon facts but upon instinct to make decisions. To call this faith-based is inaccurate and unfair. Faith is a powerful belief in something bigger than oneself and fundamentally is both humble and humbling.

By contrast, these policies show the height of human hubris. Supremely self-confident, proponents of abstinence-only education believe they remake the world — not in their own image, but in the way they imagine others to be. Simply by ignoring the fact that many teens have sex despite abstinence-only education.
Voting problems plague U.S. democracy

While we shed the blood of our military to bring democracy to Iraq, the integrity of our own democracy is at stake. If you want to know more about the 2004 election problems, read the House Judiciary Committee Democratic Staff’s report, “Preserving Democracy: What Went Wrong in Ohio?” I hope our Hawai‘i senators will also raise this issue in Congress. Hawai‘i Electoral College votes went to Kerry, yet due to illegalities, or at least irregularities in other state elections, we end up with four more years of President Bush.

Senators Inouye and Akaka, we need you to defend our right to vote by challenging problematic elections in other states. We need national standards that prevent election fraud and that will restore our faith in American democracy. If Ohio Democratic voters are disenfranchised, we all pay the price in lost elections.

Newt Chapin
Graduate Student, Entomology

而投票问题困扰着美国民主

虽然我们用鲜血捍卫了美国民主在伊拉克的实现，但我们的民主本身却受到了威胁。如果你想了解更多关于2004年选举的问题，请阅读众议院司法委员会民主党工作人员的报告，“保存民主：俄亥俄州出了什么问题？”我希望我们的夏威夷参议员也提出这个问题在国会。夏威夷的选举人票投给了克里，但由于非法行为，或者至少在其他州选举中出现了不正常的情况，我们最终得到的是四年总统布什的任期。

参议员因野和阿卡卡，我们需要你们捍卫我们投票的权利，通过挑战其他州的选举问题。我们需要全国性的标准来防止选举欺诈，来恢复我们对美国民主的信心。如果俄亥俄州的民主选民被剥夺了投票权，那么我们都要为失去的选举付出代价。

Newt Chapin
研究生，昆虫学
Cheers to campus watering hole

By Jay Chrisman
Ka Leo Campus Features Editor

In 1980, there were three places on campus where you could get an alcoholic beverage: Keo’s restaurant in the East-West Center, the Campus Center Snack Bar and the newly renovated Manoa Gardens bar, located in Hemenway Hall as a part of Ba-le.

Since there was more than one watering hole in 1980, there were different crowds. On Friday nights the CC Snack Bar had live entertainment that catered to the older, beer-swilling dorm crowds.

“They served beer in a bucket with a lid and a straw,” one University of Hawai‘i staff member remembered.

The patrons of Keo’s are a mystery, but a photograph revealed that it featured more expensive alcohol. Manoa Gardens was where the faculty, staff, graduate students, and even a few administrators would congregate.

Even the UH chancellor of the time, Durward Long, frequented Manoa Gardens on Fridays. He would come in, have a beer, talk with the students, even share a pitcher.

Although Manoa Gardens no longer sells pitchers, you can still find professors, graduate assistants, staff and students taking advantage of the only on-campus bar. The crowds merged after Keo’s and the snack bar closed, but Manoa Gardens has stayed true to its original “talk story” cafe style.

These crowds have dwindled recently because of confusion over the change to Ba-le and the loss of the beloved stir-fry station.

Political Science major Christie Yoshimura says she used to go because of the food. “One of the major draws was the stir-fry,” she said. Unfortunately, Ba-le management said the stir-fry was too unprofitable, but they plan on expanding their menu to make up for it.

“I was distressed to hear that Manoa Gardens changed hands. What is it now? A Subway?” commented Mike Leidemann, a journalism adjunct.

Ba-le Manager Trung Lam says there were never plans to close the Manoa Gardens bar although rumors abounded. “That was all just speculation. This is the only bar on campus and I think if we tried to close it there would be a lot of upset people,” said Lam.

“The only thing we’ve changed about the bar is we brought in the Jagermeister machine, more popular beers, high-end wines and a larger variety of liquor.”

Lam said the bottled imports and microbrews will soon return to the coolers on the Ba-le food service side.

Last semester Ba-le’s liquor license was renewed from selling alcohol while there was live music, a situation that caused the bar to shut down at 6:30 p.m. on Fridays last semester. This semester, the Activities Council has bands planned for almost every Friday night, but that’s no longer a problem for libation lovers.

Ba-le now has the right liquor license to accommodate it.

Friday nights aren’t the only nights you’ll find a crowd at Manoa Gardens. The TVs often broadcast sporting events, special events such as the presidential debates and CNN News.

“K Lily DJ Easy Al, host of “The Peep Show” from 3 - 6 p.m. on Wednesdays, frequents Manoa Gardens after his show. Easy Al said he likes Manoa Gardens because of the ambiance. “The people are real nice, especially the Ba-le employees and bartenders.”

You can often find other groups of people from the various schools and organizations on campus and even professionals gathering at Manoa Gardens to unwind and talk story.

My first memorable experience of Manoa Gardens was after a lecture by Pulitzer Prize-winning Los Angeles Times’ journalist Robert Lopez. I had a beer with him and some of his colleagues in Manoa Gardens. There, they shared advice that they would have never given in a lecture.

Graduate assistant Elena Morgan said, “It’s also a great place to get a vat of beer,” referring to the clear plastic 32-ounce cups that Manoa Gardens uses.

Prices range from $2.50 to $5.50 for beer, $3.75 for house wines and $5.75 for premium wines. Shots and mixed drinks range from $2 to $6.50 unless you take advantage of Manoa Gardens’ open policy on making your own mixed drinks. Ask the bartenders for the list of drinks created by your fellow patrons.

Try my Manoa Garden favorites: “The Space Cadet,” made with Belvedere Citrus, Sprite and a twist of lime; “Be Candy,” a mix of Belvedere, 99 Apples, Peach Schnapps, Malibu Pineapple and passionfruit juice; or “The Battered Bear,” a shot of Barenjaeger (a honey liqueur, not to be confused with Jagermeister) bruised with ice and created by yours truly.

Manoa Garden Bartender Martin, who has worked part time there for a year, stands at his post waiting for the post-school day rush. Martin says that the benefit of Manoa Gardens is that “the shots are pretty cheap, and that there is free live entertainment on Fridays.”

Bale’s Hours of Operation

Mon - Thursday. 10 a.m. - 8 p.m.
Friday. 10 a.m. - 9 p.m.
The bar opens at Noon every day

Band Schedule for Spring ’05

Jan. 21 Ho’okani 7 - 9:30 p.m.
Mar. 18 Ho’okani 7 - 9:30 p.m.
Jan. 28 Manoa Jams 6:30 - 9 p.m.
Feb. 4 Ho’okani 7 - 9:30 p.m.
Feb. 11 Kāhua 6:30 - 9 p.m.
Feb. 25 Manoa Jams 6:30 - 9 p.m.
Apr. 15 Ho’okani 7 - 9:30 p.m.
Mar. 4 Ho’okani 7 - 9:30 p.m.
Apr. 29 Ho’okani 5 - 10 p.m.
Mar. 11 Manoa Rocks 6:30 - 9 p.m.

CRISTOPHER WARSH | Ka Leo O Hawai‘i
A flock of Anhingas skim across the open water near Chokoloskee, Fla. The fishing town is located on the edge of the Everglades in southwest Florida, which hosts hundreds of endangered birds and other species constantly threatened by habitat loss. At least one-half of the Everglades has been lost to urban and agricultural development, and the National Audubon Society reports that three to five acres die everyday. The ecosystem is considered the only one of its kind in the world.

A young lady cannot contain her enthusiasm while waiting to dance for Jasmine Trias’ rendition of “These Islands” during halftime at the Sheraton Hawai’i Bowl, Dec. 24, 2004.

A student at the University of California Riverside walks beneath her umbrella on a rainy day in early January. Property damage and deaths have been the results of historic amounts of rainfall that have fallen across Southern California over the past two weeks.
1,2,3 ... smile!!!

A Japanese tourist (center) poses for a picture with Ashley Lofton of Nashville, Tenn., and Beruddahh Brian, a DJ for FM 100, during a radio event at Campus Center on Tuesday.
“Saw” is a dark thriller that will leave you always looking over your shoulder. Wan does a great job with lighting, flashbacks and time-lapse shots of victims trying to escape their puzzle prison. Most of the movie is set in the past, which brings Adam and Dr. Gordon to their grimy, tiled prison.

The way that each victim dies or is tortured makes you wonder what kind of sick bastard thought of these awful situations. Other macabre images dominate the film. The creepy clown-masked doll with red-spiral cheeks riding a tricycle out of the shadows definitely sent chills down my spine.

Elwes, who is known for both humorous and serious roles over the last two decades, plays a convincing victim. Throughout the film, Elwes plays a very calm, rational doctor who loves his daughter, until the end when he is most desperate. I thought he did a good job, although laughter from the shadows of the theater made me realize that the acting may have been overdone.

Whannell also did a good job, although I had no sympathy for the character and wondered why Elwes’ character didn’t just kill him to begin with. This was not because of the lack of good acting on Whannell’s part, but rather the lack of depth in his character. All we really know about Adam is that he’s a photographer, he’s cynical and he’s mad at the world: The End.

Although the movie does have its flaws, I felt that Aussie newcomers writer/director Wan and writer/actor Whannell did a great job with what seemed to be a low-budget film that was originally supposed to go straight to video. The edge-of-your-seat suspense and original plot makes up for the inconsistencies. I definitely recommend this movie.

If you like thriller/horror/crime movies such as “The Game,” “Seven,” or “Kiss the Girls,” or want to see lots of blood and creepy images, or watch a movie that will keep you guessing till the end, then you should go and see “Saw.”

According to www.movieweb.com, “Saw 2” will be released October 28th 2005. “Saw” is now playing at Wallace Theatres at Restaurant Row. For fifty cents on Tuesdays or a dollar every other day, it’ll definitely be worth every penny.

Many people who undergo intense suffering also have intense spirituality. Director Velcrow Ripper spent five years traveling the world in search of stories of extraordinary pain and revelation, focused on aspects of the sacred which give hope in times of despair.

“Doing Time, Doing Vipassana” Feb. 24 at 7 p.m.

India, a country of nearly a billion people, has a complicated and harsh prison system. After the introduction of Vipassana meditation for prisoners, a radical change overcame the lives of those incarcerated and made these in authority question the way prisons should be run.

“Latcho Drom” Feb. 27 at 5 p.m.

Gypsy culture is vibrant and alive all across Europe. This documentary shows that in the face of persecution, the Gypsies have persevered and flourished.

Looking forward, looking back

From page 8

for future human society. All seats are $10.

“Postmen in the Mountains” Feb. 3 and 6

Tradition and modernity mix subtly in this Chinese film about a man passing on his job of delivering mail to his son.

Shortcut to Nirvana: Kumbh Mela Feb. 10 and 13

Every twelve years, Indians celebrate a 2000 year-old religious festival, intended to help the faithful find a solid path to a serene life and afterlife. This documentary details the festival and tries to understand a specific Hindu answer to great questions of faith and hope.

The Yogis of Tibet Feb. 17 at 7 p.m.

The spiritual road meanders from India to Tibet, where Buddhist monks of the Drikung Kagyu tradition provide their own unique take on the universe. This documentary will be shown in conjunction with “Satya: A Prayer for the Enemy,” a documentary of the indigenous resistance to China’s occupation of Tibet since 1950.

“Doing Time, Doing Vipassana” Feb. 24 at 7 p.m.

India, a country of nearly a billion people, has a complicated and harsh prison system. After the introduction of Vipassana meditation for prisoners, a radical change overcame the lives of those incarcerated and made these in authority question the way prisons should be run.

“Latcho Drom” Feb. 27 at 5 p.m.

Gypsy culture is vibrant and alive all across Europe. This documentary shows that in the face of persecution, the Gypsies have persevered and flourished.
For more opportunities and UH-related events, visit our Web site at www.kaleo.org.
Commentary

By Kevin B. Blackstone

The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS (KRT) — Now, the question is: What will unscrupulous college coaches and their willing partners in the athletic department do to stay afloat in the new sea of rules?

Have star athletes’ homework done by so-called tutors? Construct classes called something like “Coaching Principles and Strategies of Basketball” that ask students thought-provoking questions such as: “How many points is a 3-pointer worth?”

None of that would be novel, of course. One-time football star Maurice Clarett alleged tutors did some of his coursework at Ohio State, ostensibly so that he could concentrate on carrying the football team to its 2002 national title. And Georgia basketball players practiced that time were subjected to the intellectual gymnastics required to determine how many halves are in a college basketball game.

But there will be more deception after NCAA boss Myles Brand earlier this week had his unprecedented about-face for college athletics toward a new era. May the charlatans get trampled.

What Brand has pulled off is more than a step in the right direction. It’s an almost automatically, an inverse relationship between succeeding in the classroom and winning on the scoreboard.

That is one of the things Brand’s new rules can correct. They should make it more difficult for schools to field teams made up of students with progress reports that suggest they aren’t in school as much as they are in training camp. They should also make it easier for parents and their prospective scholarship children to make a reasonably educated choice about which college to pick. The NCAA can just hang a grade on every school like California does grades on every restaurant based on its health reports.

Who would want to enter a school with a failing mark for getting its students to earn a diploma even if it sends a message to the children to make a really educated decision? What about it for their best interest. There should not be, and almost automatically, an inverse relationship between succeeding in the classroom and winning on the scoreboard.

By Kevin B. Blackstone

The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS (KRT) — Now, the question is: What will unscrupulous college coaches and their willing partners in the athletic department do to stay afloat in the new sea of rules?

Have star athletes’ homework done by so-called tutors? Construct classes called something like “Coaching Principles and Strategies of Basketball” that ask students thought-provoking questions such as: “How many points is a 3-pointer worth?”

None of that would be novel, of course. One-time football star Maurice Clarett alleged tutors did some of his coursework at Ohio State, ostensibly so that he could concentrate on carrying the football team to its 2002 national title. And Georgia basketball players practiced that time were subjected to the intellectual gymnastics required to determine how many halves are in a college basketball game.

But there will be more deception after NCAA boss Myles Brand earlier this week had his unprecedented about-face for college athletics toward a new era. May the charlatans get trampled.

What Brand has pulled off is more than a step in the right direction. It’s an almost automatically, an inverse relationship between succeeding in the classroom and winning on the scoreboard.

That is one of the things Brand’s new rules can correct. They should make it more difficult for schools to field teams made up of students with progress reports that suggest they aren’t in school as much as they are in training camp. They should also make it easier for parents and their prospective scholarship children to make a reasonably educated choice about which college to pick. The NCAA can just hang a grade on every school like California does grades on every restaurant based on its health reports.

Who would want to enter a school with a failing mark for getting its students to earn a diploma even if it sends a message to the children to make a really educated decision? What about it for their best interest. There should not be, and almost automatically, an inverse relationship between succeeding in the classroom and winning on the scoreboard.

Match Results

Singles

1. Roger Mataelonga (UA) def. Dalibor Ptak, 6-4, 6-2.
3. Bruno Alcaldedef. Jarrod Diepraam, 6-2, 4-0.
4. Paul Warkentin (UA) def. Chad Faulk, 6-2, 6-3.
5. Jason Labrosse (UA) def. Derrick Lajola, 7-5, 6-1.
6. Francois Vandermerwe (UA) def. Travis Smith, 6-2, 6-2.

Doubles

2. Weinberg/Diepraam def. Warkentin/Lajola, 6-1, 6-4.
3. Alcala/Vandermerwe (UA) def. Travis Smith, 8-0.

Sports Briefs

The University of Hawai‘i men’s tennis team opened the spring season with a loss against No. 23 Arizona.

The match, held at the UH Tennis Complex, saw Arizona beat Hawai‘i 7-0 after gaining the early 1-0 lead in a doubles point, taking the No. 1 and 3 matches. UH players Bryon Weinberg and Jarrod Diepraam were the only Rainbow Warriors to win on Tuesday, posting a 9-7 win over Paul Warkentin and Tim Mullan.

Hawai‘i was without senior Ryan Scratcs for the singles competition due to illness. After starting well in the No. 1 slot, Dalibor Ptak broke serve twice versus Roger Mataelonga before losing 6-4, 6-2. Warrior Derrick Lajola was unable to secure a win against Jason Labrosse in a 7-5, 6-1 defeat.

The Rainbow Warriors will host Florida State tomorrow with doubles matches beginning at 1:30 p.m. at the UH Tennis Complex. The Rainbow Wahine tennis team opens up its spring season on Sunday when the "Bows take on the University of Illinois at 2 p.m. at the UH Tennis Complex.
Welcome back to UH athletics

The University of Hawai‘i athletics department announced Friday that the Rainbow Warrior basketball team’s game against Southern Methodist tonight is designated “Welcome Back Students Night.” UH students will receive a free ticket by presenting their valid UH ID at a designated entrance at Gate A one hour before the game at the Stan Sheriff Center. Tickets are limited and will be issued on a first-come-first-serve basis.

Students will also be eligible to enter a neighbor island trip giveaway at the game. A sign-up table will be available in the arena concourse near Gate A.

WAC Packs go on sale

The UH athletics department also announced the sale of Manoa Maniac WAC Packs exclusively to UH students. The $30 pack includes reserved-seating tickets for the eight remaining Western Athletic Conference men’s basketball home games, membership into the Manoa Maniacs, and a free Manoa Maniacs rugby polo shirt.

The packages are now on sale at the Stan Sheriff Center box office. Students need to present their valid UH ID when purchasing the WAC Pack. Packages are limited and are sold on a first-come-first-serve basis.

*Free tickets available for SMU game

Junior forward Julian Sensley draws a foul while driving to the basket. Sensley scored 13 points and lead the Rainbow Warriors Friday with 8 assists against Coastal Carolina.

Hawai‘i’s Matthew Gipson glides past Southern Illinois’ Josh Warren in the second half.

Sophomore guard Matt Gibson drives to the hoop against Coastal Carolina University.

Team Comparison: (as of Jan. 12, 2005) UH, SMU, LTU.

Record: (overall, WAC) (9-2, 1-2), (7-5, 2-2), (6-7, 1-3).

Points per game: 66.5, 71.4, 65.1
Opponents points per game: 60.5, 66.9, 67.0
Field goal percentage: .431, .454, .415
3-point percentage: .323, .327, .309
Free throw percentage: .611, .699, .577
Rebounds per game: 36.9, 36.5, 38.3
Assist per game: 15.4, 14.8, 13.8
Assist/turnover ratio: 1.1, 1.0, 0.8
Steals per game: 7.1, 9.2, 7.5

University of Hawai‘i Men’s Basketball

Today: UH vs. SMU at 7:05 p.m., SSC.
Saturday: UH vs. La Tech at 7:05 p.m., SSC.

Tony Blazejack

Tony Blazejack