EDITORIAL NOTE

Publication of this memorial was made possible by action of the Territorial Legislature of Hawaii, which in May, 1947, authorized the University of Hawaii to arrange for preparation of a series of volumes on the history of Hawaii during the second World War, and appropriated funds for that purpose (Act 136, approved May 16, 1947). This volume is the first of that series.

Collection of the data here contained, and of other historical records which will be used for future publications, had previously been made possible by another enactment of the Legislature, which in April, 1943, named the University of Hawaii official territorial agency for collecting and preserving all available documentation on the wartime history of the islands (Joint Resolution 6, approved April 29, 1943). Funds were at that time appropriated to establish and staff a war records depository at the University.

Assembling of historical materials, research, and writing have been carried on under the supervision of a University faculty committee.
PREFACE

That their fellow Americans and all men might walk in freedom and dignity, these men died.

In reading this record of sacrifice we can find rededication to that American faith in common humanity which makes all men brothers. Though the color of these men’s skin differed, the shape of their ideals did not, for all had been formed in the American mold.

Our debt to them cannot be measured, cannot be paid.

But because they died, we who are left can still work to build that better world for which they fought. In everlasting gratitude we and those who follow us can surely do no less.

INTRODUCTION

Eight hundred and six of Hawaii’s sons gave their lives while serving in the armed forces of the United States during the second World War. In Freedom’s Cause is a tribute and a memorial to these men.

For this roll of honor, the compilers have tried to secure biographical data and photographs of all men of Hawaii who died in military service between December 7, 1941, and December 31, 1946, when President Harry S. Truman proclaimed the termination of hostilities.

Collection of these records started almost as soon as the Hawaii War Records Depository was established at the University of Hawaii in the spring of 1943. The Depository, set up as a result of cooperative action on the part of members of the faculty of the University, territorial legislators, and other public leaders, was authorized to collect and preserve all available historical records pertaining to Hawaii’s participation in World War II. One of its first projects was to assemble a file of biographical data on men who had died in military service.

Information for this volume was gathered from many sources. From the very start, the Depository collected newspaper clippings which contained mention of casualties suffered by residents or former residents of the islands. Later, the staff secured official armed forces casualty lists as they were periodically issued. In 1946 the following summaries of war casualties were published and added to the files: the War Department’s World War II Honor List of Dead and Missing, Territories of the United States, and the Navy Department’s State Summary of War Casualties, Territories and Possessions of the United States and Foreign Countries. Dr. Arthur L. Dean, chairman of the Territorial Memorial Plaque Committee, provided the list of war dead prepared for the temporary World War II memorial erected in Honolulu. High school superintendents, at the request of Dr. W. Harold Loper, Superintendent of the Territorial Department of Public Instruction, sent in rosters of their alumni who had died in service. The Hawaii Federation of Young Buddhist Associations, the 442nd Veterans Club, and the Oahu Chapter of Club 100 lent their lists of casualties. The American Graves Registration Service, Pacific Zone, supplied names and addresses of the next of kin of those men whose bodies had been returned to Hawaii for reinterment.

Most of these lists, even the official publications of the War and Navy Departments, inevitably contained some errors and omissions. Though armed forces rosters were the most detailed, they mentioned only the name, rank, serial number, type of casualty, and address of next of kin. The Depository staff wished to secure much more complete biographical information, and so in 1946 a comprehensive questionnaire was printed and distributed to the next of kin, with a request for the loan of a photograph of the deceased serviceman. These forms were sent to every obtainable address in the Hawaiian Islands, on the mainland, and even in the Philippine Islands and Java.

Generous cooperation came from all quarters. The Honolulu Advertiser and the Honolulu Star-Bulletin each twice printed the Depository’s rosters so that the public might have the opportunity to correct any omissions or inaccuracies. During the winter of 1948 troops of the Honolulu Council of the Boy Scouts of America made a house-to-house canvass of scores of families which had not responded to other means of contact. Elsie H. Wilcox and Stanley Kawahara of Kauai supplied much information on Kauai casualties. James S. Maeda of Hawaii and Stanley K. Masumoto of Maui, both officers of the Territorial Council on Veterans Affairs, provided many data from their respective islands. Richard K. Okamoto of the Veterans Administration gave additional facts on some men. In response to press and radio appeals many persons informed the Depository by letter and telephone of men whose names had never appeared on any lists.

In addition, the Depository used every other possible method to expand and verify its records. Hundreds of telephone calls were made, thousands of letters were mailed, often repeatedly to the same address, and many of the families were visited.

In the course of these investigations sixteen men reported dead on official lists were found to be alive. Some of the names listed applied to no person, living or dead. The last name of one man and the first name of another were in one case combined; in another instance omission in one list of one letter from the last name of a man had caused listing of his death as that of two persons.

It was not easy to decide whether or not a man had been a resident of Hawaii before his entry into the armed forces. There was no difficulty in the case of men who had been born, reared, and inducted into military service in the Territory, but for others the problem was more complex. As an example, servicemen from the mainland who married local girls were not legal residents of the Territory because they could not acquire legal residence while in the armed forces. Similarly, career servicemen who had lived with their families in Hawaii for years could not claim the Territory as their legal residence.

The Army and Navy rolls of honor differ in their determination of the meaning of legal residence. The official Army casualty roster lists names under place of residence on entrance into service. Thus, island men attending school on the mainland were listed as residents of the state in which they lived at the time of induction. In the Navy roll of honor, determination of residence was based on the address of the next of kin at the time of a man’s death. So, if a serviceman’s wife had moved from the islands to the mainland during the war, that man’s name would be listed under the state where his wife was living when he died. If the next of kin had come to the islands as a war worker and was living here when the serviceman was killed, the man would be listed as a resident of Hawaii. In some cases such men had never set foot in the Territory.

The combination of these and other complications made it most difficult to decide which names should be included, which omitted, from this volume. Six criteria were finally adopted: (1) birth in the Hawaiian Islands, (2) residence of parents in the Territory, (3) marriage to a resident of Hawaii if the widow still lived in the islands, (4) residence in the Territory extending over a period of years, (5) enlistment or induction into the armed forces in Hawaii, and (6) residence in Hawaii of a mainland widow of a mainland serviceman since the time of her husband’s death.

It will probably be found that the names of a few men who belong in one of these categories are not included in this volume. Every conceivable effort has been made, however, up to the last possible moment before printing, to get information about each serviceman whose name should appear in this memorial. While the response to the Depository’s request for information has in general been excellent, for some men, unfortunately, information has remained most inadequate.

The biographies are arranged alphabetically. With some exceptions due to lack of data, each biography sketches the individual’s civilian background and military record. Many abbreviations have been used, and a key to these is given on pages xvii and xviii. The first paragraph opens with the surname, followed by given names. If there is a nickname, it appears in parentheses. Then follow the man’s military rank, the place and date of birth, and the names of the parents, with the maiden name of the mother in parentheses where that information is available. If the mother has remarried, her first married name also appears in parentheses. (Note—for genealogical and cultural reasons some men of Japanese and Latin ancestries take their mother’s maiden name as surname rather than that of their father.) Next follow the names and localities of schools attended. If the man was married, the maiden name of the wife, her home town in parentheses, and the date of the marriage are given. Then appear the given names of any children; in the case of Orientals and Hawaiians ethnic names are added when they are known. The first paragraph closes with occupation, employer, and place of employment at the time of entry into service.

The second paragraph indicates whether the man entered military service by enlistment, induction, or direct commissioning, and gives the date and place of entry. (If the man was in the National Guard, the date of its federalization, October 15, 1940, is given rather than the original date of the man’s entrance into the National Guard.) Next follows the identification serial number. If a man was originally an enlisted man and later became an officer, both his serial numbers are given if they are known. In such cases date and place of commissioning follow the second serial number. Then are listed the places where the man was trained, the units with which he served, and the areas where he served. When they are known, the names of the battalions, regiments, or squadrons to which he was assigned are given, followed in parentheses by the divisions or air groups of which these units were a part. As listed, awards begin with the highest decoration and descend in rank. Then follow any unit citations and other badges received. Service medals are listed in the chronological order in which awarded. The biography closes with the type of casualty and the place and date of death.

The following example may assist the reader in interpretation:

MIYABE, CHARLES MASAMI, Sgt. b. Schofield Bks., Oahu, Sept. 4, 1919. s.
Frank Yasuda, Sr., and Shizuko (Watadani) Miyabe. Educ. Ewa Sch., Washington
.Inter. Sch., Oahu. m. Sally Sasae Kawabata (of Waialua, Oahu), Nov. 30, 1941;
s. Wallace Hideo. Truck driver; Hawaiian Pineapple Co., Ltd., Honolulu.
Ind. Army, Nov. 14, 1941, Schofield Bks., Oahu. s.n., 30102010. Trained,

Regt., 100th Inf. Bn.; Hawaiian Islands, USA, Algeria, Italy. Awards: SS, PH, AP,
A, EAME, WW II V. Killed in action near Rosignano Marittimo, Italy, July 3, 1944.

Thus, Charles Masami Miyabe was born in Schofield Barracks, Oahu, on September 4, 1919. He was the son of Frank Yasuda, Sr., and Shizuko (Watadani) Miyabe, and was educated at Ewa School and Washington Intermediate School on Oahu. On November 30, 1941, he married Miss Sally Sasae Kawabata of Waialua, Oahu. One child, Wallace Hideo, was born to them. Before entering the service Mr. Miyabe was a truck driver for the Hawaiian Pineapple Company, Ltd., in Honolulu.

On November 14, 1941, Mr. Miyabe was inducted into the Army at Schofield Barracks, Oahu, and was given the serial identification number 30102010. He trained at Schofield Barracks, Oahu, with the 298th Infantry Regiment and later at Camp McCoy, Wisconsin, and Camp Shelby, Mississippi, with the 100th Infantry Battalion. He saw service in the Hawaiian Islands, the continental United States, Algeria, and Italy. He was awarded the Silver Star and Purple Heart, and received the Asiatic-Pacific, the American, and the European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign medals. His wife as next of kin is entitled to receive the World War II Victory Medal, granted posthumously. Sergeant Miyabe was killed in action near Rosignano Marittimo, Italy, on July 3, 1944.

Although great care was taken in preparing all photographs for publication, in some cases the final reproductions are somewhat disappointing. Some of the photographs used were fine portraits; others were very poor snapshots. They are included, however, because no other photographs exist. For some forty men no photographs could be obtained.

A list of residents of Hawaii who were members of the United States Merchant Marine and died in that service follows the last of the individual biographies (page 165). Although the Merchant Marine is not an integral part of the armed forces of the nation, men of the Merchant Marine manned guns and lost their lives fighting enemy planes and submarines while engaged in moving supplies for the Army and Navy.

Alphabetical lists of names by island of residence at the time of entrance into service are given on pages 167–171; added to these are a list of the six men who were residents in the Philippine Islands, another list of the 52 who were living on the mainland of the United States at the time of their entrance into the service, and a final list of those 16 men for whom no home address was given in any of the sources used. According to this compilation 127 residents of Hawaii, 48 of Kauai, 4 of Lanai, 101 of Maui, 8 of Molokai, and 444 of Oahu died while in military service.

Four analytical tables at the end of the volume, on pages 173–176, provide information on casualties by number of decorations, by civilian occupation prior to service and place of residence, by ancestry and place of birth, and by branch of service with type of casualty and place of death. In addition to these figures, information in the files of the Depository yields the following facts: Of the 806 men of Hawaii who died while in the armed forces, 89 were officers and 717 were enlisted men. Of the total 749 served in the Army; 53 in the Navy; three in the Marine Corps, and one in the Coast Guard. Seventeen per cent (135) of the men were married. Over 77 per cent of the men (623) were less than 28 years of age; almost 8 per cent, or 64, were 20 years of age or less. One boy was only 17 years old. One third of the men (266) were between 24 and 26 years of age.

Some of Hawaii’s men were awarded special honors. Commander George Fleming Davis, USN, who commanded the USS Walke in the invasion of Lingayen Gulf in the Philippines was posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. The USS Stadtfeld, USS Kyne, and USS Pettit were named in honor of Lieutenant Sanford Stadtfeld, Ensign Elen Franches Kyne, and Radioman First Class Robert Lee Pettit, respectively. For exceptional leadership Second Lieutenants Ted Tetsu Ebata, Ross Kameo Fujitani, Minoru Kurata, Masanao Russel Otake, and Kenkichi Kenneth Teruya received direct battlefield commissions. The Hawaiian Department of the American Legion established its Post No. 27 in honor of Sergeant Joseph Shigeo Takata, who was among the first men of the 100th Infantry Battalion killed in Italy. Mokuleia Air Field, Oahu, was renamed Dillingham Air Force Base in honor of Captain Henry Gaylord Dillingham, and Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S., Post No. 4951, was also named in his honor.

Many persons, over a period of almost six years, have contributed to the preparation of this memorial. Early contacts and arrangements for collection of data were made by the late Major Vivian M. Culver, and by Catharine P. Field, and Kathryn H. Stidham, all formerly members of the Depository’s staff. Adele Culver and Ethel M. Prescott, who also formerly worked for the Depository, did excellent work in securing a large response to questionnaires and requests for photographs. Lake E. Bellinger, formerly of Honolulu, voluntarily spent hours with the records of the Honolulu Selective Service Headquarters to check for data unavailable elsewhere. Gwenfread E. Allen, research associate at the Depository, has made many valuable suggestions. Dorothy Caires has typed much of the manuscript. Kasumi Murakami, in addition to her regular duties, has generously volunteered a great many hours of extra work in typing and in checking for errors. Dr.
Thomas D. Murphy, chairman of the University’s committee on war records, has given liberally of advice and encouragement in supervision of this project.

* The Army awards a Bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster in place of an additional individual and identical decoration and a Silver Oak-Leaf Cluster to replace five Bronze Oak-Leaf Clusters; the Navy generally issues a Gold Star under the same circumstances in which the Army awards the Bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster. If, for example, an Army man receives a Bronze Star Medal and a Bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster to it, they are counted as two Bronze Star Medals. Likewise, if a Navy man receives a Gold Star in place of a second Silver Star, it is counted as an additional Silver Star.
