Selected papers from Pragmatics in the CJK Classroom: The State of the Art

This online collection (<http://nflrc.hawaii.edu/CJKProceedings/>) presents 10 selected papers from the forum on Pragmatics in the CJK Classroom: The State of the Art held from June 5 to June 7, 2006 at the University of Hawai'i-Manoa in Honolulu, Hawai'i. The papers are representative of the many outstanding contributions to the field of L2 pragmatics that were presented at the gathering. The papers are also representative of the diverse range of research interests and pedagogical issues taken up by the conference presenters. Cumulatively, the papers in this volume address current concerns in L2 pragmatics that range from the development of pragmatic competence by children and college-age students in both foreign and second language settings to pragmatics-focused instruction in the foreign language classroom for students at all levels of foreign language learning. The pedagogically-oriented contributions are diverse in their scope: from innovative approaches for teaching true beginners to the specialized curriculum of students receiving post-graduate professional training. Instructional innovations for L2 classroom pragmatics-focused teaching from each of the language groups — Chinese, Japanese, and Korean — are included.

PARTNERSHIP WITH ACTFL

In January and February 2008, CLEAR collaborated with the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL) to manage their student video podcast contest, “Not Just a Language Class!” This contest was part of the Discover Languages... Discover the World! (<http://www.discoverlanguages.org>) national public awareness campaign to build public support for language education. Students were asked to create a two-minute video podcast depicting how the study of other languages had had an impact on their lives. ACTFL contacted CLEAR and requested that we create an online submission and storage system for the podcast entries based on our Rich Internet Application called Viewpoint. We were able to tailor the contest website to ACTFL’s needs, and look forward to future collaboration – watch for this annual contest! (ACTFL is using our Rich Internet Applications... are you? <http://ria.clear.msu.edu>)
