Political Origins of Cybersecurity Capacity: Lessons from Japan and South Korea

Dr. Benjamin Bartlett

Postdoctoral Fellow

Program on U.S.-Japan Relations,
Weatherhead Center for International Affairs,
Harvard University

Cybercrime and cyber attacks are becoming an increasing threat to the economic security of both states and firms. Despite this, firms continue to under-invest in cybersecurity technologies.

In his talk, Benjamin Bartlett, a postdoctoral fellow at the Program on U.S.-Japan Relations at the Weatherhead Center for International Affairs at Harvard University, will describe the different policy approaches Japan and South Korea have taken to dealing with this issue. He will then discuss how differences in their political-economic institutional structures lead to policy approaches that vary both with each other and with the hands-off approach taken by the United States.
