A Celebration

The Ethnic Studies Program was created twenty-one years ago at the University of Hawaii at Manoa to research, teach and implement paths to ethnic pride, racial justice and international peace. Today, these issues have become even more clearly fixed as local, national and international priorities and the critical role of the Program in Hawai'i has been widely acknowledged. Many former students now work in a variety of responsible positions to promote better understanding and justice. They have learned to be proud of their own heritages and to respect others.

Our faculty and students continue to think and work globally as well as locally, from teach-ins on the Middle East, minorities in Japan and self-determination in the Pacific to issues of poverty, discrimination, housing anti-racism and Native Hawaiian sovereignty in Hawai'i. Unfortunately, these difficult problems are likely to be here for some time; fortunately, there are people and resources dedicated to their resolution. The Ethnic Studies Program honors the community, student and faculty pioneers and supporters who have worked with us since our establishment two decades ago and commits itself to more decades of solid achievement.
