MESSAGE: Thank you for your kind invitation including me in your international seminar on the legal aspects of the maritime problems of the Aegean Sea on January 19-20, 1995. It would be an honor to participate, and I greatly appreciate being included in this event. I am happy to confirm my attendance at this event, and look forward to receiving additional information about the agenda, the other participants, and how I can contribute. I am currently undertaking a research project on the boundary disputes of the South China Sea, and may be able to bring some of the ideas currently being discussed in that area to assist with the effort to find a solution to the Aegean problem.

With regard to my air travel to the seminar, I would like to ask whether it might be possible for the Institute to provide me with a Business Class ticket in light of the long distance I must travel. Because my spring-semester classes will have already begun, I will be obliged to squeeze this trip into my teaching schedule, and traveling by Business Class will allow me to avoid some of the jet-lag associated with such a long journey. I understand, of course, that this will increase your expenses, and I am not making this request a condition of my participation. Nonetheless, I would like to respectfully request such travel accommodations, if your budget will permit, in order to enable me to join in this seminar fully and vigorously.

Thank you again for your invitation. I look forward to the chance to return to Turkey once again and to have the opportunity to work with you on this important topic.
