PACIFIC SCIENCE

A QUARTERLY DEVOTED TO THE BIOLOGICAL AND PHYSICAL SCIENCES OF THE PACIFIC REGION

Volume 49 January 1995 Number 1

Papers Presented at a Joint U.S./Japan Symposium on "The Ecology and Evolutionary Biology of Islands with Implications for Conservation Research"

Edited by Kenneth Y. Kaneshiro, Colin Basset, and Sheila Conant

CONTENTS

Preface
Kenneth Y. Kaneshiro, Colin Basset, and Sheila Conant 1

The Hawaiian Islands as a Model System for Ecosystem Studies
Peter M. Vitousek 2

Phytogeography and Ecology of Scalesia (Compositae) Endemic to the Galápagos Islands
Syuzo Itow 17

Evolution of Hawaiian Ferns and Fern Allies in Relation to Their Conservation Status
Warren Herb Wagner, Jr. 31

Variation in Reproductive Strategy of the Tropical Paper Wasp, Ropalidia fasciata (Hymenoptera: Vespidae), in Okinawa in Relation to Island Environmental Conditions
Yosiaki Itô 42

Social Structure and Reproductive Systems of Tramp Versus Endemic Ants (Hymenoptera: Formicidae) of the Ryukyu Islands
Katsusuke Yamauchi and Kazuo Ogata 55

(continued on following page)

CONTENTS (continued)

Distribution and Ecology of Birds of Japan
Hiroyoshi Higuchi, Jason Minton, and Chieko Katsura 69

Why Do Introduced Species Appear to Devastate Islands More Than Mainland Areas?
Daniel Simberloff 87

Toward Ethical Treatment of Animals in Hawai'i's Natural Areas
Charles P. Stone 98

Previous issue published October 1994